HANNA'S JOKE ON WOOD.

Senator Delivered It Unintentionally at a Dinner of the Carabao.

The following joke on Senator Hanna was passed around through the senate the other day by persons attending the recent dinner given at Washington by the Military Order of the Carabao, says the New York Herald:

Senator Hanna was entertaining the members of the Republican national committee that night and could not get to the dinner until very late. John M.
Thurston was delivering an address on the glories of the army and navy and concluded his speech by calling on Senator Hanna to make a few remarks.
The calls for Senator Hanna were so insistent that he arose and told the Carabao that he was too tired to talk.

"If I had known Thurston was going to do such a stupid thing as this," he remarked, "I should have remained in my room and sawed wood."

Now, Wood is the question uppermost in the army mind. Instantly there was a great commotion around the table.

Roars of explosive laughter filled the room, and the Carabao arose as one man and shouted:
"You're sawing Wood all right, senator! How soon will the saw cut through?"

Senator Hanna looked dazed for a minute. Secretary of War Root smiled sardonically, and Senator Foraker, who is managing General Leonard Wood's case before the senate committee on military affairs, gazed upward at the ceiling.

"All right," said Senator Hanna when the hubbub had subsided, "if you want to take it that way you are welcome to do so."

To Sterilize Water.

Tincture of iodine is valuable for sterilizing water. Four drops in a carrate of water is sufficient to render the liquid fit for drinking purposes within half an hour.

INDIANA'S RAGING TADS.

Bottle of Port to Be Opened by a Social Club's Last Member.

A young man of Covington, Ind., in 1847 read in a Cincinnati newspaper of a social club which had been formed years before that date. The last surviving member of the club had broken the bottle of whisky that had been on the banquet table at every anniversary of the first meeting.

The incident impressed the reader, and he formed a similar club in Covington. The membership was twenty, and the club was called the Raging Tads. The members were Barnett D.
Van Trooner, Albert Mallory, Shel Han-negan, James McMannoney, Lewis R.
Hettfield, Charles Hansicker, Samuel Fields, Sanford Crane, William Bradfield, Edward Mallory, Sidney Harper, Ed Pullen, Alexander Hettfield, Elias Wilcox, Frank Clark, Harvey Johnson, Rufus Fribble and Bob Brown.

Instead of whisky a bottle of port wine was put on the table, and this was to be broken by the last member.
On Thanksgiving was the fifty-sixth anniversary dinner of the Raging Tads.
Two of the four survivors met at Covington, with the bottle between them.
Colonel McMannoney, who will be eighty years old in March, and Lewis Hettfield, who is now eighty years old, were the partakers of the feast. Bob Brown, eighty-three years old, lives in Nebraska, and Harvey Johnson, of the same age, in Illinois. They were unable to attend.

The Covington men are hale and hearty, but were much affected by the smallness of their numbers. They shed tears as they spoke of their former companions. Mr. Hettfield said:

"I don't want to be the last. It will be a sad, a very sad, occasion, the opening of that old bottle."

"I wouldn't open that bottle for anything in the world," said Colonel Mc-Mannoney.

The bottle is cared for as if it were of priceless value. From one Thanksgiving to the next it is stored in the vault of the Covington Banking company, where it will not have to remain many years before its seal is broken by the last of the Raging Tads.

"Sniff," the New Game.

"I hate even to touch on the subject of cards and contest games," says a writer in Harper's Bazar, "they are so fearfully hackneyed, and yet I am told that the seekers for interesting ideas in entertaining demand always some variety of contest, so it may not be out of place to suggest as an occasional substitute for 'bridge,' 'progressive' en-chance and 'hearts' the game of 'sniff,' played with dominoes, which is the new and fashionable game, for almost the same game as in the game books you will find under the heading of 'muggins.' 'Sniff' seems to have a vogue all its own, and played progressively it has decided recommendations.
It requires brains, but not too active ones nor too much concentration.
Prizes are necessary, but almost any hostess could afford to give something."
